This project is another attempt to garner support for alternative energy without looking at the terrible effects that such a project will have on the environment. Molokai and Lanai are the remaining undeveloped islands in Hawaii and it is not acceptable to destroy the landscape of these beautiful islands for a ill fated project such as windmills. This solution to the energy problem is not a feasible solution. Windmills only work when the wind is blowing at a substantial rate, therefore it does not replace the need for generating the same amount of power just in case the wind is not blowing. The damage to our environment both on land and under the sea is not worth this experiment.
